Sebastian.Horlemann@bardehle.de

Sebastian Horlemann is an attorney-at-law and commercial mediator who has been advising national and international clients in complex cross-border patent litigation for several years. His work includes both advising clients out of court and representing clients in patent infringement proceedings pertaining to various technological fields. Additionally, he conducts invalidity and opposition proceedings, asserting his clients' interests.

Sebastian Horlemann has special experience in the fields of mechanical engineering, semiconductor technology, network technology, and medical devices. Another focus of his work is on telecommunication technology. Since he has contributed to various proceedings on FRAND licenses, Sebastian Horlemann also has comprehensive knowledge on standard-essential patents and their implications under antitrust law.

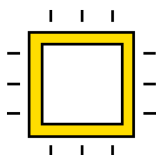

Additionally, Sebastian Horlemann advises clients in licensing negotiations, draws up expert opinions on infringement matters, and advises on contractual agreements, for example in the area of technology transfer by means of R & D agreements.
